ABOUT COURSE:

Human Rights and policing are the most debated topic these days and it is also occupying a pivotal position in policy considerations at national and international levels. Human rights principles serve as a check on the power of law enforcement agencies, helping to prevent abuse and misconduct. By adhering to human rights standards, law enforcement agencies are less likely to engage in excessive use of force, discrimination, or other forms of misconduct. Therefore, upholding human rights in law enforcement contributes to promoting the rule of law, which is essential for orderly society. When law enforcement agencies respect human rights, they help strengthen the legitimacy of the legal system and promote a culture of respect for rights and freedoms.

The purpose of this training programme is to equip participants with the knowledge, skills, and ethical framework necessary to effectively integrate human rights principles into policing practices. Through a comprehensive understanding of national as well as international human rights standards and legal obligations, participants will be able to learn navigate complex situations while upholding individuals' rights and dignity. This program aims to foster a culture of accountability, transparency, and community engagement within law enforcement, ultimately promoting trust and collaboration between police forces and their communities while exploring the issues and challenges related to human rights and policing. By emphasizing conflict resolution, ethical conduct, and awareness of social justice issues, participants are to be empowered to contribute positively to their professional roles while safeguarding human rights for all.
